We encourage you to participate in a discussion of an article that illustrates many aspects of research in aging. It offers an opportunity to explore issues about the distinction between association and cause, an issue that underlies ASIGG’s investigation about how people view evidence.

This session will be a discussion, not a presentation. Please come with your ideas and thoughts about the article.

The goals of ASIGG are to:
-
- Deepen your thinking about the various sociocultural, public policy, health issues, and other complex aspects of aging
- Explore the nature of evidence and how information is used differently by different disciplines
- Provide opportunities to engage and collaborate with graduate students and faculty representing different disciplines
- Augment research and professional skills

Date: April 12, 2016
- 5:00 PM to 6:30 PM
Location: D-199 Mayo

ASIGG is supported by the University of Minnesota Graduate School and organized by the Center on Aging and School of Nursing. All graduate students, staff, and faculty with an interest in aging studies are invited to participate.

Food and beverages will be available.

Free and open to all, but please register in advance: http://goo.gl/forms/zMf0tQR9P3

Questions? Contact the Center on Aging at 612-624-1185 or coa@umn.edu

The University of Minnesota is an equal opportunity educator and employer.